

Matthew McDonnell

PRACTICE AREA: HEALTH LAW

Matthew McDonnell is an associate with Barrett & Singal's Litigation practice. His practice focuses on representing individuals and businesses in complex civil litigation and white-collar criminal matters in state and federal court.

Matt has been involved in representing individuals and businesses in civil disputes involving breaches of contract and fiduciary duties, various torts including negligence and invasion of privacy, and alleged civil rights violations. He has also helped defend individuals and business entities during the course of state and federal investigations related to fraudulent business and healthcare practices.

PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

Prior to joining Barrett & Singal as an associate, Matt served as a legal intern at the Massachusetts Securities Division and a compliance intern at the Harvard Management Company. Matt received his M.B.A. as part of a dual-degree program at Northeastern University, during which time he served as the Chief Compliance Officer for the 360 Huntington Fund, a student-run mutual fund. During law school, Matt also worked as a law clerk for the firm's Litigation Group, in addition to working as a law clerk at two other law firms in Boston.
